Indian Festival held at the Hancheries, unite in the declaration that everything was orderly, and not one Indian was under the influence of liquor during the Festival. The Agent visited the tribes during the Feast, and on a certain occasion directed some of the leaders to call the tribes together as he wished to talk to them. The Indians refused to inter rupt their games, etc., for this purpos and the Agent left, much annoyed. There had been a growing discontent as to various arbitrary measures adopted by th Agent, who seems to make the mistake of trying to make the Indians too good, the main, though prudence may dictate somewhat slow haste. Thus, the Indians be contracted at the Agency and according to Christian rights, while they prefer their old customs, etc. The most serious item, however, is said to be in the growing habits of polygamy among the Indians. They have observed the customs of their Mormon neighbors, and have taken kindly to the example shown. Indeed it is said that much proselytism has been attempted by the Mormons, and the Agent, determined to break up the growing custom, has imprisoned several bucks who paraded two wives. These and similar causes have led to some conflict between the Agent and the now Postmaster at Burlington, Iown, various bands. The Captains and many of the bucks left on last Sunday evening for the Agency, merely to talk these matters over with the Agent, and secure for themselves more liberty of action.
